“ A memory I have of my childhood was picking rocks in the field with my father driving tractor with a float behind it. Once the field was plowed, he would attach this wide wooden float to the tractor and drag it over the field. If the float overturned any large rocks. We would either throw the rocks on the float or carry them to the edge of the field. Over the years I thought, I wish we would quit growing such big rocks.

Love you. Dad
