“ My memory of Harold Hartt was when he would come to my parents house about 4:00 a.m. delivering milk, and I would hear the empty glass bottles hitting against each other as he went back to his milk truck. Later in my life, a strong wind blew down his new barn, and the neighborhood worked together to clear the debris. I was one who helped to build the cow barn as it looks today. When he would come to our house to collect for milk he had delivered, my mother enjoyed talking with him. Good memories!
